Fans of this "sophisticated" yet "unpretentious" Northport New American "love the food" served in a "handsome" setting designed with original 1850s woodwork and a "beautiful" heated patio; the village location works for dining "before or after a show" or taking a post-meal "stroll along the harbor", and though a few feel squeezed by the "too-small" room and moderately expensive menu, many are "impressed" by the "update" under a new owner and chef.
